As a truck driver, my XM radio is at times my sole source of entertainment and information. There are many parts of this country in which it is difficult if not impossible to pick up local radio service. The NAB would propose that I simply sit in silence and pray that there are no accidents or storms in my chosen pathway rather than have access to instant, up to date information. Even when I am able to receive a radio signal from the local market, I cannot pick up the signal from the city to which I am travelling on regular radio. These services are invaluable to me, and the FCC should not let them be curtailed simply because the members of the NAB is afraid to compete.
